

The All-Party Parliamentary Group on the Environment is the largest cross-party group working on sustainability in the UK Parliament. In 2026, we are campaigning on marine leadership, the circular economy, and making the UK more resilient to climate change. We work across parties to strengthen the influence of parliamentarians on public policy and debate on the environment. We work with our associate members to bring external expertise into Parliament. The Secretariat is run by Green Alliance.

Our Parliamentary Members:

We have 147 parliamentary supporters and a highly active cross-party committee:

Fleur Anderson MP
(Labour):
Chair of the APPG

Wera Hobhouse
MP (Liberal Democrat):
Vice Chair

Rebecca Smith MP
(Conservative):
Vice Chair

Adrian Ramsay MP
(Green):
Vice Chair

Our Associate Members:

The APPG is supported by a growing network of associate members striving to support environmental leadership and looking to engage with policymakers.

Our membership includes major businesses, financial institutions, trade bodies, charities, and international NGOs.

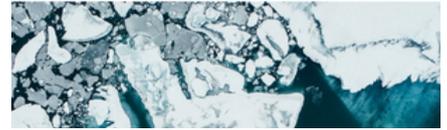

We build broad support for ambition

Our recommendations, like our Global goals for COP28, are endorsed by cross-party MPs, Peers, businesses, and NGOs

UK quits treaty that lets fossil fuel firms sue governments over climate policies

Britain joins France, Germany, Spain and the Netherlands in withdrawing from charter it says 'penalises' shift to net zero

We campaign on consensus

We secured the UK's withdrawal from the Energy Charter Treaty and Government support for a moratorium on deep sea mining

We build awareness of emerging issues

We use our public and media profile to increase momentum, such as with bans on disposable vapes and horticultural peat

MPs call to ban disposable vapes to prevent a 'new public health catastrophe'

The majority of single-use vapes are binned and not recycled and they contain plastic, copper, rubber and a lithium battery, warns Baroness Kate Parmentier

We bring experts and decision-makers together

We host meetings with Ministers, roundtable discussions, site visits, and receptions to give Parliamentarians expert input

We shape parliamentary debate

We support our parliamentary members to secure debates and make interventions on legislation with specialist briefings

The work of the APPG would not be possible without the support of our associate members. For an annual fee, joining as an associate member has numerous benefits:

Invitations to online and in-person Environment APPG events, and Q&As with the Committee or Secretariat to discuss areas of interest

Collaboration on specialist briefings and policy reports for our parliamentary members, and on public campaigns

Contributions to our monthly newsletter outlining upcoming events, parliamentary business, and the work of our parliamentary members that gets distributed to all our MPs and Peers

Opportunities to network with other associate members who are leading in their fields of sustainability, both in person and through our Whatsapp group

"Now is a critical time to turn ambition into progress. In 2026, we will be campaigning on marine leadership, a circular economy for plastic, and making the UK more resilient to climate change. The power of the Environment APPG is its ability to lead large numbers of MPs in engaging with Ministers to achieve change and I am proud to lead it."

Fleur Anderson MP, Chair of the Environment APPG

"The Environment APPG is a great forum that brings together politicians, NGOs and the business community to discuss some of the biggest challenges of our time. As well as networking and events, the APPG plays a big role in making sure environmental policy is well evidenced and gives opportunities for participants to be heard in policy debates."

Craig Melson, Associate Director for Climate, Environment and Sustainability, TechUK

"Nature is in crisis, and the Environment APPG is one of the leading cross-party groups in Westminster advocating for action to tackle biodiversity loss and climate change. As a member, the RSPB value the great work of the APPG and the role they play for the environment sector across Parliament."

Beccy Speight, CEO, RSPB

"The Environment APPG is a crucial bridge between parliament, business and civil society and a most valuable forum for networking and discussion, whether it's organising away-days to renewable energy sites, ministerial briefings on climate policy or evening receptions."

Chris Hewett, CEO, Solar Energy UK
